DESTRUCTION OF BOATS AT MEMPHIS Great Snow Storm at New York.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—It is snowing again this morning. It is the heaviest snow that has fallen for twenty years. Thousands of business men in the lower part of the city slept in their offices last night unable to get home. No mails left the city yesterday, and none have reached the post, office since noon of the same day. Vessels were detained by the storm, and there were no arrivals from sea yesterday.

LATER. The snow has ceased.

A few local trains arrived here since ten o'clock, aided by several engines.

The poor are suffering from the absence of the usual supplies of bread and milk.

Edwin Forrest once remarked that he never knew what it was to be afraid. Driesbach, a lion-tamer, asked him home one night after a performance. The story

"Forrest assented, and the two, entering a house, walked a long distance through many devious passages—all dark—until finally Driesbech, opening a door, said: 'This way, Mr. Forrest.' Forrest entered, and immediately heard the door slammed and locked behind him. He had not time to express any surprise at this, for at the same moment he felt something soft rubbing against his leg, and putting out his hand, touched what felt like a cat's back. A rasping growl saluted the motion, and he saw two fiery, glaring eschalls looking up at him. 'Are you afraid, Mr. Forrest?' asked Driesbach, invisible in the darkness. 'Not a bit.' Driesbach said something; the growl deepened and became hoarser, Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 27.—The shine more fiercely. Forrest held out two weather is bitterly cold.
